Haas Door Company “Energy Tax Credit Statement”

February 23, 2009

If you have purchased a Haas Door Company 600, 700, 800, or 900 series insulated garage door between January 1, 2009 and December 31, 2010, you may be entitled to an energy tax credit under the new stimulus legislation. These insulated doors have all been tested in accordance to the ANSI/DASMA 105 test standard for thermal transmittance and air infiltration. The following checklist may assist you in determining whether you qualify for the tax credit. All boxes must be checked in order to qualify.

- Your new garage door is insulated (i.e., reduces heat loss or gain).
- The door was installed at your principal residence in the United States.
- The door was installed after December 31, 2008 and before January 1, 2011.
- The door was installed on a conditioned space or an attached garage.
- The door is expected to remain in service for at least five years.

The maximum tax credit for all energy-efficient purchases of doors and windows is $1,500 (previously: $500).
